THE NAPANEE IRON WORKS NEW FACTORY NOW COMPLETED

Building One Hundred and Fifty Feet Square and Factory Cost $65,000.00—Most Up-to-date and Complete Works of Its Kind in the Province.

Starting on a small scale and with a small capital twelve years ago in the old building on Mill street, enlarged a few years later to nearly twice the size, The Dominion Rock Drill Co. found during the past few years that they were outgrowing their premises, and the result was the formation of The Napanee Iron Works, Limited, which absorbed the Dominion Rock Drill Co., and new buildings were decided upon. Work was started this spring on the new factory on Ann and West streets which is now practically completed, the machinery nearly all in place and in a few days everything will be in good running order, and Napanee may well be proud of this large factory and greatly enlarged business.

On entering the building from the southeast corner, we entered the well appointed offices, including the manager's private office, general office, lobby, and office for the sales department, which is under the management of Messrs. Lecky & Collis. The offices are all finished in cypress, with hardwood floors and metallic ceilings, and include two Taylor vaults, wash room and lavatory.

Leaving the office we entered the machine shop and erecting room, which is 47x150 ft. This room contains all the machinery, such as lathes, etc., and is equipped with a travelling crane, a siding from the C. N. R., also entering from the north. This crane will move the heavy machines from any part of the shop to any desired point, as well as load the completed products onto the cars. Above the machine shop—on the west side of the room—is situated the pattern shop and storage room for patterns. The electrical equipment is also in this room, the whole power plant and lighting system being controlled from this point.

To the south of the pattern room, and directly over the offices, are the drafting room and reading room for the accommodation of the workmen.

The reading room will be for the employees, as it will be for a lunch room as well. A will furnish heat, and c tables make a complete equi. Going downstairs again, machine shop via the wash lavatory, which contains each one accommodating t sons and furnishing both ho water. Six closets are al room.

Passing on we came to shop in the southwest corner—47x75—is equipped travelling crane and a carrying the heavy boilers machine shop.

Next comes the blacksmith 35x55, and the foundry 47x northwest corner. A travel the latest type of Collierville track for conveying castin machine shop make up a plete equipment.

Between the foundry and shop, on the north, a siding run in from the C.N.R., wh raw material will be unload

Three nonagenarian peers, of London, Eng., celebrated their birthdays this week. The Earl of Wemyss, who has lived under six sovereigns, having been born in the reign of George III, was ninety-five Monday; Lord Strathcona was ninety-two on Tuesday, and on Wednesday Lord Nelson the "Father of the House of Lords," begins his ninetieth year. All three are still vigorous, Lord Strathcona holding that hard work has kept him young.

A sea serpent story at Amherst Island has stirred the residents of that little village. A Kingstonian, who has just returned from spending a few days at the island, says that the monster has been making his appearance along the shore, at stated intervals, and that parties are making a determined effort to make a capture. Everything in the line of eatables, left on the village wharf has been devoured by the strange visitor, his latest "stunt" being to carry off all the milk cans, with their contents.

Mayor Waller informed the council that he had been in communication with Lloyd & Son, Limited, of Trenton, manufacturers of go-carts, express wagons, etc. They were desirous of changing their location and he had made a visit to Trenton and discussed with the company the question of locating at Napanee. As the company were desirous of making a change and getting in working order by November prompt action was necessary if Napanee wished to make a bid for the business. The manager was ready to come to Napanee and meet the council and representative citizens and discuss the question at any time. The mayor was authorized to make an engagement for Tuesday night at the council chamber.

Mr. M. B. Mills addressed the council in reference to the condition of the swing bridge. At present the bridge was almost unworkable, and on Saturday last when it was necessary to swing it the work had to be done with a block and tackle. If the bridge was not repaired and put in such a shape that one man could swing it he did not care to have the job of looking after it. He suggested that the makers of the bridge be communicated with and asked to send an expert man to look it over and report what is needed.

Moved by Coun. Simpson, seconded by Coun. Osborne, that the Streets Committee be authorized to secure the services of a competent man to look the bridge over and have necessary repairs made. Carried.

Defence Fund Is Being Celebrated "System"

Prosecuting Attorney Whitely advised That $50,000 Is Being Collected by Police Friends of Accused Tenant—Becker Is Arraigned—His Confederates Are Handed Over to Their Own Lawyer For Him.

New York, Aug. 6.—A fund of $50,000 is being raised in defence of Charles Becker, lieutenant charged with the murder of Herman Rosenthal, according to the information of District Attorney Whitely yesterday.

The money is being collected, said, by the so-called system of the subject of a separate indictment by the district attorney, who there is a corrupt alliance between "system" and the gambling founded on graft and blackmail.

The information came to the court yesterday in connection with the arraignment of Becker to stand indictment against him. In the hours of legal procedure, included the withdrawal by the purpose of offering motion to validate the indictment, that was represented by three lawyers of whom entered the case seriously withdrew, while of the other two seemed to have their own minds when things were over. It was said lawyers engaged by Becker were satisfactory to the collector of the defence fund, who, the day before, had practically a prominent criminal lawyer, the lieutenant, superseding the collector's own personal choice.

John W. Hart, who has represented Becker, was the one who conducted the public trial yesterday's legal proceedings, withdrawing his client's plea of "guilty," he made one motion to dismiss the indictment on the ground that it was irregular, and to review the grand jury minutes to take evidence to show whether ground for the indictment existed. Judge Mulqueen refused arguments on the motion, and set the case over until Friday. Hart in his application to the jury minutes held evidence produced was no more than testimony of a witness in the alleged crime, named Rose, "Bridgie" Webber and Vallon.

Becker, looking somewhat his week of prison life, was taken to the court room with a grave demeanor during the proceedings.

Although the district attorney has evidence in his possession that he could use in his charge of extortion with his confederates as head of the "arm" squad, the prosecutor decided that he proposed to drop the murder charge at the present time, he would not hasten the trial, his evidence to support the charge in shape.

New Party Opens Its National Convention in Chicago.

Unusual Amity Marks the Opening of
Col. Roosevelt's Supporters and ex-Senator Beveridge of Indiana Is Elected Temporary Chairman—
"Teddy" Is Invited to Make His Confession of Faith to Delegates.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—The first session of the first convention of the new national Progressive party, of which Col.
Theodore Roosevelt is sponsor, was held in the Coliseum yesterday, and while the sitting was attended by all the usual ceremonies of a national political gathering, the actual proceedings were suggestive of a love feast.

Not a dissenting voice was raised
during the session. The question of negro representation from the south

reached that part of his speech advocating suffrage.

To-day's session of the convention promises to be largely one of speechmaking, with Col. Roosevelt's "confession of faith" as the centre of interest. The adoption of a platform and the nomination of Presidential and vice-presidential candidates will come Wednesday, followed by ad-journalment that evening.

The probable slate will be: For vice-president, Governor Hiram W. Johnson of California; for permanent chairman, Judge Ben B. Lindsey of Denver.

Negroes Were Shut Out.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—Contesting negro delegates from Florida and Mississippi were barred from the Progressive convention yesterday by the national committee. The contests were decided at a stormy executive session of the committee, that lasted for three hours, just before the convention met.

the usual ceremonies of a national
political gathering, the actual proceedings were suggestive of a love feast.

Not a dissenting voice was raised
during the session. The question of negro representation from the south
had caused friction earlier in the day in the national committee, but there was no echo of this fight on the floor of the convention. The delegates were at times explosive in their enthusiasm. Many of the state delegations came into the hall singing and shouting in their delight to the birth of the new party, and three hours later left the building in the same happy frame of mind.

Although green hands were supposed to be at the helm, the machinery of the convention worked smoothly and efficiently. There was no roll call of delegates, but the delegate section of the floor, arranged in the same manner as the Republican National Convention a few weeks ago and accommodating nearly 1,100 people, was entirely filled. The alternate section also had its full quota.

There was not the same crush of spectators yesterday as at the Republican gathering. But when the proceedings began the galleries had few empty seats. The convention leaders were enthusiastic over the showing made in the Coliseum yesterday and made the claim that no better looking, more substantial set of delegates was ever seen upon the floor of a national political convention.

Former Senator Albert J. Beveridge was presented as the choice of the national convention for temporary chairman. He was elected with acclaim and then delivered the keynote speech of the convention.

"We stand for a nobler America.
We stand for an undivided nation.
We stand for a broader liberty, a fuller justice. We stand for socia brotherhood as against savage individualism. We stand for an intelligent co-operation instead of a reckless competition. We stand for mutual helpfulness instead of mutual hatred.
We stand for equal rights as a fact of life instead of catch word of politics.
We stand for the rule of the people as a practical truth instead of a meaningless pretence. We stand for a representative government that represents the people. We battle for the actual rights of man.

"To carry out our principles, we have a plain program of constructive reform, which was wrong and out of date and where we tear down, we mean to build what is right and fitted to the times. We hearken to the call of the present. We mean to make laws fit conditions as they are and meet the needs of the people who are on earth to-day. That we may do this, we found a party through which all who believe with us can work with us, or rather, we declare our allegiance to the party which the people themselves have founded."

Mr. Beveridge was cheered throughout his speech, a tumultuous interruption coming when he assailed the "Boss-ridden old parties." The rul-

Taft to Veto Tariff.

Washington, Aug. 6.—President Taft yesterday began preparing his veto message on the steel, wool and cotton tariff revision bills, soon to come before him from Congress. His vetoes will be based upon his understanding that the bills have been drawn almost regardless of the tariff board's reports on those schedules.

The steel bill probably will be sent to the White House first. The President yesterday had not decided which he would first disapprove.

Hot Spell Helps Crops.

Winnipeg, Aug. 6.—A general improvement in crop prospects yesterday is the result of 48 hours of hot, dry weather all over the prairie provinces.
Showers prevail in Manitoba, but otherwise crop conditions are ideal.

When a Scotch schoolmaster entered the temple of learning one morning he read on the blackboard, "Our teacher

The pupils expected there would be a contented himself with adding the word

"driver" and opened the school as usual.

MAN AND THE SOIL.

Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo, author of the Common Sense Medical Adviser, says "why does not the farmer treat his own body as he treats the land he cultivates. He puts back in phosphate what he takes out in crops, or the land would grow poor. The farmer should put back into his body the vital elements exhausted by labor, or by ill-health induced by some chronic disease." Further, he says, "the great value of my Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is in its vitalizing power. It gives strength to the stomach and purity to the blood. It is like the phosphates which supply nature with the substances that build up the crops. The far-reaching action of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is due to its effect on the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition. Diseases that begin in the stomach are cured through the stomach. A bilious spell is simply the result of an effort made by the liver to catch up when over-worked and exhausted. I have found the 'Discovery' to be unsurpassed as a liver regulator and rich blood-maker."

MISS LOTTIE KNEISELY of Perth, Kansas, says: "I will here add my testimony of the effectiveness of your remedy upon myself. I was troubled with indigestion for two years or more. Doctored with three different doctors besides taking numerous kinds of so-called 'stomach cures' but received no permanent relief. I was run down, could not sleep at night with the pain in my chest, caused by gas on the stomach. Was weak, could eat scarcely anything although I was hungry nearly all the time. About one year and a half ago I began taking your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and after having taken several bottles am nearly cured of stomach trouble. Can now eat without distress and have gained fifteen pounds in weight. I thank you for your remedy and wish you all success in your good work."

TESTED HER TEMPER.

And She Took Her Medicine With Thanks and a Laugh.

"What was the coolest act of self possession you ever witnessed?" a friend asked of a noted animal trainer.

"Well, I guess you're looking for yarns about lions and tigers," replied he. "I've seen all the best tricks and some mighty quick stunts that weren't in the regular program, but I saw something that hit me harder than any of these. It was at dinner at a palatial hotel in Palm Beach. Opposite me sat a young lady with her dowager mamma and a swell that I took to be the fiance. The girl was beautiful, dressed like a princess and a lot more human looking than her two companions. By some blunder a very awkward waiter served her, and in one of his flourishes he managed to pour the contents of a full finger bowl squarely on the girl's head. The water trickled over the elaborate coiffure, reached her face and dripped on her bare arms and neck. Mamma positively snarled; my lord fiance began to bluster, but that thoroughbred American beauty glanced at the waiter's crimson face and gave a clear, sweet laugh.

"I'm so thankful it wasn't coffee or soup," she said, and not another word. "That was the coolest act of self possession I ever saw."—New York Press.

THE ELEPHANT'S TRUNK.

It May Justly Be Called One of the Miracles of Nature.

The trunk of the elephant may justly be considered as one of the miracles of nature, being at once the organ of respiration, as well as the instrument by which the animal supplies itself with food. Nearly eight feet in length, endowed with exquisite sensibility and stout in proportion to the massive size of the animal, this organ will uproot trees or gather grass—raise a piece of artillery or take up a nut, kill a man or brush off a fly.

It conveys the food to the mouth and pumps up enormous draughts of water, which, by its recurvature, are turned into and driven down the capacious throat or showered over the body. Its length supplies the place of a long neck, which would have been incompatible with the support of the large

SLEEPING CAR ABLAZE

Passengers on Train at Toronto Have Close Call.

While Crew of C.P.R. Train Are Filling the Gasoline Tank on a Sleeper at the Union Station the Liquid Explodes—Passengers Escape In Night Clothes—Several Lose All In Hurried Departure.

Toronto, Aug. 6.—When a gasoline tank attached to a sleeping car of the C.P.R. Ottawa train, No. 34, exploded at about 11.20 o'clock last night at the Union Station, the John McLean party of Philadelphia, who had retired in the sleeper, were forced to hurriedly vacate their berths in night attire to escape death from fire.

Much of their clothing and some hand bags were left behind in their escape, and were either destroyed by the flames or damaged by water.

The McLean party had arrived from Philadelphia last night and made connection with the Ottawa train, which was scheduled to leave Toronto for Ottawa at 11.30. There were about 20 in the party. The train was made up about an hour before it was due to depart and the people who occupied one of the sleepers had retired for the night.

The train crew were filling the tank under the car with gasoline to supply the lamps. The hose connected with the main running under the yard tracks leaked. One of the crew was passing with a lighted lantern, when the escaping gas fumes were lighted by the lamp.

An explosion followed.

Flames flared up from the gas tank and in a moment the car itself had caught fire. The explosion broke windows. The noise of the breaking glass awakened the sleeping party. They quickly jumped from their berths and made a hurried exit, snatching whatever was handy.

An alarm was sent in to the fire department. After 30 minutes' continuous labor the fire was extinguished, but the car was badly damaged.

None of the party were injured in any way, although all were badly frightened. The company will make good any loss they sustained.

PRESS COMMENTS.

Toronto Globe—Sir James is determined that the bar shall endure and the people of Ontario shall continue to penalize enterprise by an antiquated method of taxation.

Ottawa Journal—Moose Jaw doctors and nurses who went to Regina's assistance will not accept any pay. That's genuine western neighborliness, though the two cities are forty miles apart.

Edmonton Journal—The difficulty in floating Canadian loans that is being experienced in London just at present will prove only temporary. The market is not in good condition, speaking generally, and we have been asking too much of late.

Hamilton Spectator—Thirty Toronto fruit dealers have been fined $10 apiece, with worse to come if they still fail to observe the by-law concerning the protective covering by-law for their wares. What's good for Toronto in this respect is none too good for us.

Hamilton Spectator—Should the movement to preserve the Gaelic, or ancient language of the Irish, now in progress in Chicago, reach Canada, it might prove an appropriate counterfoil to the efforts of our French-Canadian citizens on behalf of their own tongue. But it would be awful.

Guelph Mercury—So much leather is being used in making sides and seats for automobiles that the price of shoes is going up. The most remarkable thing about all these price boosts is the plausible excuse that accompanies them. Next thing chickens will double in price because so many wings are needed for the airships.

Guelph Herald—The Toronto Globe argues against the possibility of keeping the navy question, temperance or the tariff out of politics. As a matter of fact the two former questions have no business whatever being dragged into politics, but the Opposition will have it so, and we cannot prevent them exploiting such matters, if they are determined.

Hamilton Spectator—When will Ontario newspapers learn that Henri Bourassa represents nobody but himself? He has been a disturber and an irreconcilable from the first day of his advent in Canadian politics. Like his grandfather, Louis Papineau, he seems to feel charged with a mission to set the French of Quebec in array against the powers that be.

Stratford Beacon—The conduct of Captain Murray and the other officers of the C.P.R. steamer Empress of Britain, which collided with the coal ship Helvetia, in the St. Lawrence on Saturday afternoon, after the collision is worthy of commendation. The passengers pay tribute to the bravery and coolness displayed, and it seems to have been worthy of the best traditions of British seamen.

Woodstock Sentinel-Review—It is well that Premier Borden has a cool head and is not overcharged with emotionalism; otherwise there might be some danger that he would be

Bridesmaids and Ushers

The wedding procession is a thing where there are a bridesmaids. They add, however, the expense of the occasion bride is now expected to receive each a present. This is usually something to be worn at the wedding pair of hatpins, a fan or a pair of jewelry, says Flora Hall.

throat or showed over the body. Its length supplies the place of a long neck, which would have been incompatible with the support of the large head and weighty tusks. A glance at the head of an elephant will show the thickness and strength of the trunk at its insertion; and the massy arched bones of the face and thick, muscular neck are admirably adapted for supporting and working this powerful and wonderful instrument.

An Unruffled Statesman.

In the early days, when the people sent their wisest men to make the public laws, a man of peculiar traits, but of sterling worth, was sent to the Massachusetts legislature from the town of Douglas. He wore an old fashioned farmer's frock, which was sadly out of place in the legislative hall, where some of the fastidious statesmen from Boston and other cities vied with each other in the correctness of their attire.

Soon after the arrival of the Douglas man one of the Boston representatives, seeking an opportunity to have fun at his expense, called out to him, "Have they no smarter men than you to send to the legislature from your district?"

The man from Douglas smiled innocently as he replied, "There's a heap of smarter men up my way, but the mischief of it is they hain't got no clothes good enough to wear down here!"—Boston Herald.

Geometry.

Geometry, so called from its original application to measuring the earth, is generally believed to have had its origin among the Egyptians. It probably sprang from the surveyor's art. The annual inundation of the Nile carried away all landmarks and boundaries, and some scientific means of settling the disputes incidental thereto had to be devised; hence surveying, the undoubted fountainhead of geometry. Geometry is said to have been introduced into Greece by the philosopher Thales about the year 600 B. C. The science was cultivated by Pythagoras, through whom it was made popular in Greece, from which country it spread over the then known world.—New York American.

The Successful Hostess.

The first thing for the hostess to learn is to be composed. She may be frightfully nervous and anxious, particularly if she is just beginning to entertain, but she must resolutely put on a mask of composure and assume a virtue if she has it not. Nothing is of much importance excepting her own demeanor. A fussy hostess who scolds her servants, wrinkles her brows or even forgets to listen to the man who is talking to her is the ruin of a dinner. One clever mother, advising her newly married daughter on this subject, remarked that if stewed puppy dog was brought to the table she must not notice it. Few hostesses are subjected to so severe an ordeal as this, but the remark contains a good hint.

any way, although all were badly frightened. The company will make good any loss they sustained.

Spy Scare In Germany.

New York, Aug. 6.—A cable from Kiel yesterday says:

Germany is in the grip of another spy scare to-day. Following Saturday's arrest in Eckernaerde of five Englishmen just landed from Copenhagen and suspected of spying on the Kaiser's coast fortifications, a German sergeant, a corporal and a private were arrested yesterday accused of furnishing military information to England and France.

From the Englishmen, who had crossed from the Danish capital in a cutter, it is said that many photographs and letters were taken. The men were sent to jail at Metz, where they will be tried.

Germany has punished eighteen foreigners or Germans said to be in foreign employ in little more than two years on charges of spying.

Excursionists Surprised.

Brockville, Aug. 6.—Five hundred excursionists were detained by the local custom officers and many of them found to have contraband goods in their possession early Sunday morning on the return of a party which had gone on a moonlight excursion to Ogdensburg, N.Y., on Saturday night. The surprise of the excursionists on finding the Canadian Pacific Railway dock securely guarded from exit, was voiced in loud protestations, but the officers were adamant.

Search brought to light large quantities of dress goods, shoes, tobacco, personal effects of every kind and description and sorts, men's wearing apparel, trinkets, feminine trinkets and all sorts of odds and ends which the shoppers had accumulated.

Poincare Off for Russia.

Paris, Aug. 6.—Raymon Poincare, the French Premier, started yesterday for Russia surrounded by all the signs usually accompanying a great state pilgrimage.

Near eastern questions and the Franco-Russian naval convention, the signature of which by M. Poincare in St. Petersburg will bring the whole of the fighting forces of the allies within the terms of an offensive and defensive treaty of alliance, are to be the main subjects of discussion between the Emperor of Russia, Sergius Sazanoff, Russian Minister for Foreign Affairs, and the French visitors.

Bandana Their Emblem.

Chicago, Aug. 6.—The red bandana handkerchief, as an emblem of the new party yesterday almost supplanted the moose head. Nearly every delegate wore a bandana knotted about his neck or his hat band. Street dealers drove a large trade in the handkerchiefs, selling all qualities from cotton to silk.

"Buy a 'Roosevelt battle flag,'" shouted the vendors at every downtown street corner, and the crowds responded with liberal purchases.

Women as well as men wore the new party emblem and milliners already are besieged with orders to trim hats with the gaudy handkerchiefs.

well that Premier Borden has a cool head and is not overcharged with emotionalism; otherwise there might be some danger that he would be carried off his feet by the attentions showered upon him in Great Britain. Canadians are all proud of course, that the representative of Canada should be fittingly honored by the people of the motherland; still it is well that the Premier should keep his head, and that the question of Canada's contribution to Imperial defence should be settled upon its merits, without the influence of feasts and receptions.

Canadian Colliers—Because he is worth a dollar to the fisherman who catches him, the King Salmon has had considerable trouble keeping to himself. For years the packers have been looking for him. To discover his whereabouts meant a fortune for someone. And now his sanctuary has been found. Far up the coast of the Pacific, sixteen miles from a certain Canadian island, the fishing craft swing in the sea, killing the King Salmon. This was his secret feeding ground, where he drove and herded the herring schools into these shoal waters and inlets in order that he might eat them at his leisure. His end is near. About this time next year it will be announced in the newspapers that a Government is sending out an expedition to try to find one King Salmon, to be stuffed and placed in a museum.

Irving Would Have to Hustle.

When Henry Irving was making one of his last tours of the country he found himself with an open date in Michigan. His manager wired the manager of a small opera house in a nearby place, asking if he could use Irving on the night in question. The following message came back:

"What does Irving do?"

The manager used up much expensive space on the wire explaining the leading points about Irving and for his pains received the following reply:

"Cannot use Irving in this town unless Irving can parade."—Judge.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

THE BEACH FROCK.

What the Summer Girl Will Wear at the Shore.

WHITE RATINE COSTUME.

The white ratine frock pictured is just the costume for mornings at the seashore or in the mountains. The model has the low armhole, now so fashionable for all outing costumes, and the new sash, which has two short ends, simply folded or lapped over the belt portion, is very good style. White buckskin boots make the frock very smart.

The Cult of Gathers.

In many of the little lingerie dresses a slight fullness is distributed in gathers about a waist line that has again shifted to about its normal position. These gathers, however, are only possible for slim figures. They are flattened into tucks for more portly forms. An attractive yoke is made by shirring this fullness over cords, but let the one with the least tendency to plumpness beware of this effect if any tidiness of figure is prized. The horizontal lines of these cords about the hips have a directly opposite effect from the long, vertical lines on which everything has been planned for some seasons past, so there is a discount on one's height. Naturally any fabric intended for shirring over cord must be of a decidedly diaphanous nature. Where a second material is used for trimming chiffon cloth is found very successful, because this season it can be used with almost every sheer textile that is used for summer frocks. Then, too, it comes in almost every possible shade in all colors. As another qualification in its favor it has just sufficient resiliency of texture to keep it from getting a flattened out, crushed look after being worn a few times.

Japanese Teapots.

In Japan teapots may be had in any shape, in any design, at any price. One model is a huge caldron-like affair that will hold three gallons, while others are so small that a thimbleful may be said almost to make them overflow.

The Japanese have teapots in the shape of birds, beasts and fowls. Fishes and frogs have lent their forms to others. A beetle design is very popular, as is one depicting a fat, squirming eel. Buddha himself has been pressed into service as a model. Swans, correct to the last curl of neck and feathers, form teapots so small that they can be hidden in the palm of the hand. There are lotus bud pots and pots in the shape of tea houses.

All manner of materials are included in the composition. Inlaid silver, hammered copper, iron exquisitely wrought and all the different kinds of Japanese pottery have been used in the manufacture of teapots. Several favorite designs bring $100 apiece, but so cheap is artistic handwork in the far east that many others may be bought for a few cents.

A Charity Box.

Take an old trunk or large box and call it your charity box. Into it put all the articles with which you have finished—pictures, magazines, books to read and old ones for scrap books, pretty cards, clothing and all sorts of wearing apparel, pieces of silk, cloth and lace for dolls' clothing, envelopes with foreign stamps, all the little things you have finished with. Every once in a while go through it and dispose of its articles to orphan asylums, hospitals, etc. Then when you are called on for contributions to rummage sales all you have to do is go to the box and not have to "rummage" around.

New Bridge Accessories.

The woman or man who does not play bridge nowadays stands out as an almost unique personality, so universal has it become as a popular form of entertainment, and so there have appeared upon the market many new ideas pertaining to the game. A machine has been invented to deal the cards, thus saving the dealer any extra exertion. A pack of cards is placed in the machine, the dealer turns a crank, and the cards are distributed.

Next Wednesday, the date for the Firemen's Demonstration and Band Tournament, every place of business and all residences should be decorated for the occasion. If the weatherman hands out fine weather for the day Napanee will be visited by one of the largest crowds in the history of the town. There will be an exceptionally large crowd from a distance, and all the residents and business people are asked to make an effort and decorate as much as possible and assist in making the visitors carry away with them the impression that Napanee is the finest town in Ontario.

Shot His Companion.

A regrettable accident happened on Mr. M. B. Mills, yacht on Saturday last by which Harold Barker, a young lad, was shot by one of his companions, Ernest Degroff. The boys had gone on board the yacht, which was lying at the dock and the Degroff boy picked up a small rifle lying in the boat and intending to aim over the other lad's head, pulled the trigger. To his consternation he shot the lad Barker in the side. The injured lad was at once taken to Kingston hospital where the bullet was extracted and at the present time he is doing well and will no doubt recover. The Degroff lad was arrested and will appear before the magistrate in a few days when the cause of the accident will be fully inquired into.

His business interests have kept him there but never succeeded in changing his loyalty to the crown and at his death he remained a Canadian citizen, passing to a citizenship on high. He leaves to mourn him a wife, Sarah E. Lane, and two sons, Dr. M. S. Lane, of Bluefields, N.C., and Prof. W. B. Lane, of Lynchburg, Va., two brothers, Mr. Henry Lane, of Napanee, and Mr. Chas. Fifty Thousand Men Required.

The wheat crop of 1912 will be the greatest ever harvested in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, thus requiring the farm laborers of the East to recruit and assist in harvesting the World's greatest bread basket. The Governments of the respective Provinces state that fifty thousand men will be required for this year's harvest. These will have to be principally recruited from Ontario, and the prosperity of Canada depends on securing labor promptly. The Canadian Pacific, on which Company will fall practically the entire task of transporting the men to the West, is already making special arrangements for this year. Excursions from points in Ontario to Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta will be run and special trains operated, making the trip in about thirty-six hours and avoiding any change of cars or transfers. This will be a day shorter than any other route. See display ad. in this publication for dates, rates and conditions. Consult any C. P. R. agent for full particulars, tickets, etc.

The Glorious 14th.

Meet your friends in Napanee on Wednesday next, August 14th. They will all be here for the Fireman's Demonstration. Come in early for by ten o'clock in the morning excursions will be pouring into the town from all directions by boat and rail. Band and reception committees will meet all trains and boats, and there will be something doing all the time. Special preparations are being made to feed and handle the large crowds which will be here on Wednesday. Don't miss the parade at one o'clock sharp, which will go by the way of the principal streets to the Napanee Driving Park, where a large and varied programme of Athletic sports, horse races, base ball games, etc. will be pulled off for the entertainment of the crowds. Have a look into the show window of the J. J. Haines' Shoe Store and admire the beautiful trophies given away for the athletic events. The towns of Lindsay, Port Hope, Trenton and Deseronto, each of whom have a team entered in the hose reel race, have gone wild over this event and they are all coming to Napanee with the express purpose of "rooting" for their teams, hoping by their encouragement to assist their boys to win the much coveted trophy which goes to the winner of this race. The cup for the hose reel is valued at $250.00 and is the most beautiful trophy ever put up for an amateur event. This week the Napanee Firemen also secured another attraction which be a novelty, indeed. They have secured the services of an amateur walker, who will give a one mile and a half exhibition walk and will guarantee to cover the distance inside of eleven minutes. If you miss visiting Napanee on the 14th you will be sorry for the rest of your natural life.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Aug. 5.—The local grain market continues quiet, with little or no business doing for export. Liverpool's closing is a factor in the present situation, but such enquiries as were received for wheat from the continent were shaded off again from the bids of Saturday, in sympathy with the weaker feeling in the option markets, and proportionately out of line with sellers' views here. As a result no business was done. Oats are quiet, but firm. Export trade in flour is as usual slow at this time of the year, but a fair business is passing to meet local demands.

An easier feeling prevails in the butter market, owing to the decline of prices of Cowansville and Ste. Hyacinthe boards on Saturday. The market was in a wait-

Should Have Made a Will

Children Neglect Aged Mother.

A sad case was brought to the attention of a charitable society recently, when they received an application for relief from an elderly woman.

Her husband had been prosperous,
but died without leaving any will.
The widow did not insist on her rights to a third of the estate, but turned everything over to the children, believing that they would look after her for the balance of her life. She had lived with one after another of her married sons and daughters, and her story of the way in which she was treated causes a very serious reflection on the ingratitude of children.

The main point is, however, that it is not fair for a man to leave an in-protected and inexperienced woman the responsibility of deciding on purely business affairs. It was the plain duty of the husband, as it is the duty of every person to make a will. There is no excuse, because it is no longer necessaary to employ a lawyer or incur large expense—the BAX Will Forms can be obtained for 35 cents. Accompanying each form is a specimen will,
properly filled out and full instructions
for your guidance.

The BAX Will Form filled out and witnessed by two friends is absolutely binding and indisputable.

For sale by all druggists and stationers or sent on receipt of 35 cents by the BAX Will Form Company, 250 College street, Toronto. For sale by A. E. Paul, Napanee.

 1200 head of butchers' cattle, 250 calves,

 dency was to lower prices. Top steers, week ago, ranged $6.75 to $7. The bulk of the trading was done in cattle, with

Dr. Hennequin's Infant Tablets saved our little girl's life. Three doctors said she'd

My baby was so weak from sickness that he could hardly walk. We thought he would die. We could find nothing to help him. I was given a sample package of three Hennequin Tablets; we used them; I saw a change at once. We secured the Tablets and our baby improved every day, and is now a bright, fat, good natured boy; you could not believe he was the same child. They certainly cured my baby and saved his life. I believe them to be the best medicine ever sold for babies. Mothers if your babies are not well take my advice and try these Tablets.—MRS. JAMES RIBBELL, Barrydale, Ont.

WINNING A BRIDE.

Mark Twain's Wooing of Lovely Olivia Langdon.

NOT HELPED BY HIS FRIENDS.

They Seemed to Agree That He Would Make About the Worst Husband on Record, but Miss Langdon's Father Took a Different View.

In Harper's Magazine Albert Bigelow Paine, the authorized biographer of Mark Twain, tells how the great humorist first met Olivia Langdon, who afterward became his wife. They met in New York. Young Charles Langdon, who had been on the voyage of the "Innocents," brought them together.

"At the old St. Nicholas hotel, which stood on the west side of Broadway between Spring and Broome streets, there were stopping at this time Jervis Langdon, a wealthy coal dealer and mine owner of Elmira; his son Charles and his daughter, Olivia, whose pictured face Samuel Clemens had first seen in the bay of Smyrna one September day. Young Langdon had been especially anxious to bring his distinguished Quaker City friend and his own people together, and two days before Christmas Samuel Clemens was invited to dine at the hotel. He went very willingly. The lovely girl of the miniature which he had first seen in her brother's stateroom had been often a part of his waking dreams. For the first time, now, he looked upon its reality. Long afterward he said:

"It is forty years ago. From that day to this she has never been out of my mind."

"His was not an untroubled courtship. When at last he reached the point of proposing for the daughter of the house neither the daughter nor the household offered any noticeable encouragement to his suit.

"There was only a provisional engagement at first. Jervis Langdon suggested, and Samuel Clemens agreed with him, that it was proper to know something of his past as well as of his present before the official parental sanction should be given. When Mr. Langdon inquired as to the names of persons of standing to whom he might write for credentials, Clemens pretty confidently gave him the name of the Rev. Mr. Stebbins and others of San Francisco, adding that he might write also to Joe Goodman if he wanted to, but that he had lied for Goodman a hundred times and that Goodman would lie for him if necessary, so his testimony would be of no value. The letters to the clergy were written, and Mr. Langdon also wrote one on his own account.

"Clemens was in Jacksonville, Ill., at the end of March, 1863, and in a letter to his publisher states that he will be in Elmira two days later and asks that proofs of the book be sent there. He arrived according to schedule, anxious to hear the reports that would make him, as the novels might say, 'the happiest or the most miserable of men.' Jervis Langdon had a rather solemn look when they were alone together. Clemens asked:

"You've heard from those gentlemen out there?"

"Yes, and from another gentleman I wrote concerning you."

"They don't appear to have been very enthusiastic from your manner."

"Well, yes; some of them were."

"I suppose I may ask what particular form their emotion took?"

"Oh, yes; yes, they agree unanimously that you are a brilliant, able man, a man with a future, and that you would make about the worst husband on record."

"The applicant for favor had a forlorn look."

"There's nothing very evasive about that," he said.

"There was a period of reflective silence. It was probably no more than a few seconds, but it seemed longer."

"Haven't you any other friend that you suggest?" Langdon said.

"Apparently none whose testimony would be valuable."

"Jervis Langdon held out his hand. 'You have at least one,' he said. 'I believe in you. I know you better than they do.'

"And so came the crown of happiness. The engagement of Samuel Langhorne Clemens and Olivia Lewis Langdon was ratified next day, Feb. 2, 1863."

A Fortune in His Legs.

During the reign of Queen Elizabeth an English gentleman of wealth named Corbet, of a distinguished family near Shrewsbury, bet that his leg was the handsomest in the country or kingdom and staked estates worth $400,000 on the subject. He won the wager, and a picture is still preserved in the family mansion representing the process of measuring the legs of the different contestants.

THE WICKEDEST CITY.

Havana Seems to Qualify For Unenviable Reputation.

Several cities have been called the wickedest city — Reno, Nev., Port Said, and Irkutsk, Siberia, for instance. They are wicked cities, but their wickedness is of a sordid variety. Havana is wicked and gay.

In Paris the "night life," gay restaurants and dances are for the English and American tourists. In Havana the "gay life" is for the natives. Its wickedness is part of its life.

Everything in Havana is wide open. And of its fifty-seven varieties of wickedness the mildest is gambling. Gambling houses in Havana are open to both men and women. All that is necessary is a pocketful of bank notes. Roulette, faro, hazard, and poker are at hand.

Even as one sips his chocolate in the morning the daily round has its beginning. A half dozen peddlers of lottery tickets interrupt the meal. The lottery in Cuba is run by the Government for enormous prizes. The first prize is $100,000.

The tickets are hawked about the streets and sold at every corner store. But the fact that the Government conducts it does not guarantee its "being on the level." At a recent drawing the first prize was not awarded for the reason that that particular ticket had not been sold. The public didn't like it, but they kept on buying tickets, for it is their instinct to "take a chance."

If one sits around a cafe any length of time—and a large part of every day is spent in this way—one is certain to be invited to witness a cock fight. Cock-fighting is one of the commonest sports in Cuba, and while it is against the law, it is rarely interfered with. Large sums change hands on these bloody exhibitions.

The cafes are crowded, there is a constant stream of automobiles and carriages up and down the boulevards. The sidewalks are filled with people hurrying to the theatres. They are nearly all dressed in the height of fashion. Havana is one of the richest cities in the world. Its styles come direct from Paris. The only cheap things are tobacco and matches.

At 8 o'clock performances begin in a dozen theatres. In the moving pictures and variety theatres one finds real wickedness. The "grizzly bear," "the bunny hug" are modest compared with the dances shown on the stages of the variety theatres, where the public is admitted for 25 and 50 cents. The little plays are beyond description, and the actresses wear very scanty attire.

At midnight Central Park, which is in the heart of the city, is as crowded and filled with life as the Strand and Piccadilly before the theatres swallow up the crowds. The cafes are filled with people who eat ice cream and sip soft drinks. There is very little drinking of alcoholic liquors in Havana.

Of course, all Havana does not go to the theatre. Many of the fashionable set seek the clubs, some seek the gambling palaces and others attend masque balls, which are given nightly. The gayest affairs are given on Sunday nights at the Theatre Nacional. They begin about midnight and last until 8 and 9 o'clock on Monday morning.

In Search Of Ananias

He Was Equal to the Occasion

By CLARISSA MACKIE

"Barnabas, no matter how many stories you may tell, remember I can always ketch you in every one. Just you wait until I put on my white apron and get my knitting. Now go ahead, Barnabas, and make Miss Telham's hair curl with some of them outrageous yarns of yours."

So after Captain Barnabas had thrown some more driftwood on the andirons (for a cold easterly storm was raging without) and Maria Fish had brought in a glass dish of mammoth red apples we settled ourselves in our several chairs.

"Now for the story about the cook," I urged.

"Lawdy me, Barnabas, can't you tell about something not quite so commonplace as cooks?" cut in Maria with disgust. "I'd like to hear about some of them tropical islands, and I'm sure Miss Telham would too."

"This is about tropical islands as well as cooks, Maria," explained the captain as he lighted his customary pipe. "As I was telling Miss Telham here, something she said reminded me of a cook we had aboard the old Indus thirty years ago. It happened when we was off Ferry Island, laying becalmed for two days.

"The Pacific was as smooth as a freshly ironed handkerchief or a mirror or something like that. It reflected the clouds at sunrise and sunset and took on all the colors of the rainbow, but the rest of the day it was as blue as the sky that stared down into it.

"All hands lay around and waited for a breeze, and naturally after a spell they got mischievous. Ananias Sline, he was our cook then—his first voyage, too, and he was a greenhorn if ever one shipped before the mast! The men complained about his cooking, but so far as I could see what he put on the cabin table wasn't much worse than my other cooks had turned out. But Ananias wasn't slow in learning sea ways.

"At the end of the first day all hands were feeling peevish. Ferry Island lay an eighth of a mile distant and some of them had been wanting to go ashore and look for fruit and turtle eggs. I put it off till the next day because I was expecting a whiff of wind every minute, and when Ananias had piped all hands to supper the calm was 'still raging,' as Billy Sparks, my mate, used to say.

"When Ananias brought the platter of salt beef and set it in front of Finley Beale, who had been in my fo'c'sle for a dozen years, old Beale rose up and, raising his hands over the salt beef, gave the sailor's blessing—so they called it. Says he:

"'We don't know, sir.'
"Maybe he's fell overboard," suggested Billy Sparks.

"He can swim, sir."
"I thought things over for a minute. Billy Sparks had just been telling me the episode in the fo'c'st'le when the men fired plum duff at Ananias.

"There's one of two things has happened," I said, leading the way forward.

"Yes, sir," says the man Jenks.

"He's either run away because you've hurt his feelings. Ananias is sensitive, he is, or—Cooky was stunned when you fetched him a blow with that heavy plum duff and he's lying insensible around somewheres," I tells them.

"He ain't aboard the Indus—we've searched her from stem to stern."

"You gone aloft, too?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then he's swum ashore," I said. "You've skeered the only cook we've got aboard, so's he taken to the jungle ruther'n serve aboard the Indus. Billy, you get some bits of rope yarn and let 'em draw lots as to who'll go ashore and fetch cooky back."

"They didn't have nothing to say—maybe they were glad at the freedom I was offering. They had been wanting to go and get turtle eggs and fruit.

"So they drew lots, and old Beales and Jenks drewed the short bits and they jumped into one of the boats and rowed ashore. All hands stood by the rail and watched 'em till they disappeared in the jungle. Pretty soon we thought we heard distant shouts; then all was still.

"It was too quiet to be very comfortable for the rest of us, and after an hour had passed they drawed lots again and two more men set off for the island.

"When they didn't come back after another had gone I began to get anxious, and so I sent all the rest of the men, headed by the mate, ashore, telling 'em to send up some rockets if all went well with 'em.

"While they were all off looking for Ananias Sline I can tell you I was feeling mighty lonesome, especially after I'd heard sounds of a melee ashore, followed by the usual silence, and no rockets. I was uncomfortable, too, for here I was all alone in charge of the Indus and all my men had been either killed by some wild animal or savage or captured. I couldn't think of anything else to explain what had happened.

"Then I heard a swash, swash of somebody swimming toward the Indus, and I leaned over the rail and made out a man's head. He was coming with an overhand stroke like the man in the moon we had seen hours ago and which Billy Sparks had thought might be the missing cook.

"I hailed him, but he didn't answer until he hauled himself dripping wet over the rail, and who should it be but Ananias Sline, cooky himself.

"What's the matter ashore?" I asked him after he'd got the water out of his eyes and was wringing out his clothes. "Where you been?"

"Then Ananias told me, and it was a queer story. Seems he was tearing mad over the way all hands had treated him at supper that night, and, being a revengeful little rat, he'd swum ashore and hid himself in the top of a

FREEDOM OF LONDON.

It Carries With It the Right to Keep Pigs in St. James' Parish.

Many towns in Great Britain enjoy special and peculiar privileges. When, some years ago, parliament deprived the Cinque Ports of their ancient privileges, Brightlingsea, a Cinque Port "limb" or "appanage," was in some way overlooked. Consequently its inhabitants are still exempt from serving on juries, they cannot be taken by the press gang, and the town can still appoint its own ale taster. It is at Brightlingsea that the ceremony of electing the mayor takes place in the belfry of the parish church.

In at least one manor, that of the Earl of Carnarvon, the inhabitants may cheerfully disregard the enactments of the ground game act, passed twenty years ago. The ancient right of free chase and warren over freehold land is still in force there. Indeed it was actually exercised a very few years ago, and a private bill was brought into parliament designed to do away with it. The bill however failed to become law.

The freedom of the city of London carries with it, nominally, at any rate, the right to keep pigs in the parish of St. James, Piccadilly. But, if any one was disposed to avail himself of this liberty land in that part of London is somewhat too costly for profitable pig farming.—London Family Herald.

The Way Spaniards Smoke.

The Spaniards are the most expert smokers in the world. A native takes a heavy pull at his cigarette, inhales the smoke, takes up a wine skin or bottle, pours half a pint down his throat, holding the vessel a foot from his mouth, without spilling a drop, and then, with a sigh of satisfaction, closes his eyes and exhales the smoke from his nose and mouth in clouds. He will also inhale the smoke, converse for a few minutes in a natural manner and then blow out the smoke.

for a dozen years, old Beale rose up and, raising his hands over the salt beef, gave the sailor's blessing—so they called it. Says he:

"Old hoss, old hoss, how came you here?"

"From"—

"He stopped there and glared at Ananias Sline, who had turned in his steps and was listening with his eyes popping out, silly like.

"'Cooky,' roars Beale, pointing his knife at the pale Ananias, 'did you cook this here poor old hoss?"

"'Tain't a hoss!' cheeped Ananias, frightened like.

"What is it, eh?"

"It's first class salt beef—it says so on the barrel.' Ananias kinder spunked up courage now because he thought he was telling 'em something they didn't know.

"First class salt beef, eh? First class salt hoss, cooky, and don't you sass me again, understand? This was first class salt hoss till you cooked it. Now git out!"

"Ananias tried to get out, but somehow all the men got into the spirit of the thing, and first one tossed a biscuit at him, and another flung a bone, and then a big piece of cold plum duff struck him in the eye, and he went bawling like a baby. The men seemed to feel better after that and eat their supper quite amiable.

"Along about two bells I was sitting on deck, smoking this here very pipe and talking to Billy Sparks. We was watching a great big round moon rise up from the very edge of the sea—that's the way it looked to us.

"What was that, captain?" asked Billy, quick-like.

"What was what?" I asked him, but just at that minute I saw it, too, and it did look queer.

"Against the big yellow moon we could see the small black shadow of a man's head and shoulders. Up his arms would go in an overstroke, one after the other. Then he disappeared.

"First time I ever seen the man in the moon," said Billy Sparks, still staring over the rail toward the island.

"What was it—a native?"

"Guess so, though I'm sure this island is uninhabited. Maybe a party of 'em from the Wearys come over to gather turtle eggs. Perhaps he was prospecting around the Indus—ah! There goes the lubber—see, captain, against the white beach!"

"Billy pointed toward the island, and I looked and could see plain enough in the moonlight that flooded the white sandy beach of the island a moving black shadow that was presently blotted out in the dark shadow of the jungle growth.

"We sat there awhile longer, watching the moon rise above the sea and light up the tall palms and cocoanuts of the island. I had knocked out my pipe and was for turning in when one of the watch came shuffling toward me.

"Excuse me, sir," said he, 'but we can't find Cooky.'

"Cooky" was their pet name for Ananias Sline, you know.

"Well, what do you want to find him for? Ain't you had your grub?" I asked him.

"Yes, sir, that ain't it—only he ain't on the ship!"

"Ain't on the ship? Where is he then?"

and over the way all hands had treated him at supper that night, and, being a revengeful little rat, he'd swum ashore and hid himself in the top of a tall cocoanut palm near the water, jest about in line of where a boat would land if anybody missed him and come to look for him.

"He gathered his arms full of cocoanuts and waited for the searchers after him. Pretty soon they came, Beales and Jenks, and when they got near enough and began to sing out his name crack went a cocoanut against, one head and then another. It didn't seem to scare Ananias a bit when them two husky seamen fell down on the sand. He jest set there and waited for some more to come.

"Before the second party reached shore the first two men was coming to, so cooky up and promised 'em another dose if they so much as peeped. The second party went down kinder hard and dead, but Ananias was so full of revenge he didn't care. When the rest of 'em arrived Ananias was ready with the cocoanuts and pelted 'em so fast that they took to the jungle, thinking a gorilla or something like that was around. Leastways that's what Ananias said, and nobody came back to dispute his word till morning, and then when they all climbed over the rail they was a pretty sheepish looking crew, Billy Sparks and all. I really felt sorry for 'em.

"Ananias has come back," I says to 'em kindly, 'and if nobody wants to explain what happened they needn't. Cooky and me will stand watch while all hands goes below and turns in. I think there's wind off there to the southard, and we must get along.'

"They looked kinder grateful and shambled off to bed, but I noticed after that that nobody threw any words or anything else at Ananias Sline till we got in New York harbor."

"And what happened when you arrived in New York?" I asked, with interest.

Captain Barnabas smiled knowingly as he passed the dish of red apples.

"It would be spilling another good story to even hint at it," he promised.

THE THREE GUARDSMEN

By ALEXANDRE DUMAS

"Well, captain," said Porthos, quite beside himself, "the truth is that we were six against six, but we were not captured by fair means, and before we had time to draw our swords two of our party were dead, and Athos, grievously wounded, was very little better. For you know Athos! Well, captain, he endeavored twice to get up and fell again twice. And we did not surrender—no, they dragged us away by force. On the way we escaped. As for Athos, they believed him to be dead and left him."

"And I have the honor of assuring you that I killed one of them with his own sword," said Aramis, "for mine was broken at the first parry—killed him or poniarded him, sir, as is most agreeable to you."

"I did not know that," replied M. de Treville, in a somewhat softened tone. "M. le Cardinal exaggerated, as I perceive."

"But pray, sir," continued Aramis, who, seeing his captain become appeased, ventured to risk a prayer—"pray, sir, do not say that Athos is wounded. He would be in despair if that should come to the ears of the king, and as the wound is very serious, seeing that after crossing the shoulder it penetrates into the chest, it is to be feared!"

At this instant the tapestry was raised, and a noble and handsome head, but frightfully pale, appeared under the fringe.

"Athos!" cried the two musketeers. "You have sent for me, sir," said Athos to M. de Treville in a feeble yet perfectly calm voice. "What do you want with me?"

And at those words the musketeer, in fireproof costume belted, as father, as I have said, I will do something for you, young man. I dare say you have not brought too large a stock of money with you."

D'Artagnan drew himself up with an air that plainly said "I ask charity of no man."

"Oh, that's all very well, young man," continued M. de Treville, "that's all very well. I am well acquainted with all those lofty airs. I myself came to Paris with 4 crowns in my then release you from all your promises—even that of procuring my admission into the musketeers, for, before everything, I am desirous to avenge myself!"

"Beware, young man," cried De Treville. "If you see him coming on one side of the street pass by on the other! Do not cast yourself against such a rock. He would break you!"

"That thought will not prevent me," replied D'Artagnan, "if ever I should happen to meet with him."

"In the meantime, if you will take my advice, you will not seek him," said Treville.

All at once the captain stopped, as if struck by a sudden suspicion. This great hatred which the young traveler manifested so loudly for this man, who—a rather improbable thing—had stolen his father's letter from him! Was there not some perfidy concealed under this hatred? Might not this young man be sent by his eminence? Might he not have come for the purpose of laying a snare for him? "I know he is a Gascon," reflected he, "but he may be one for the cardinal as well as for me. Let us try him. My friend," said he slowly, "the king and the cardinal are the best of friends. Their apparent bickerings are only feints to deceive fools. Be assured that I am devoted to both these all powerful masters."

"Now, young man, regulate your conduct accordingly, and if you entertain, whether from your family, your relations or even from your instincts, any of these enmities which we see constantly breaking out against the cardinal, bid me adieu and let us separate. I will aid you in many ways, scarcely had he descended the stair when a hand of iron seized him by the belt and stopped him. "You are in a hurry," said the keteer, as pale as a sheet. "I pretend you run against me. Excuse me! and you believe is sufficient? Not at all, you man. You are not polite. It is I perceive that you come from France."

D'Artagnan had already struck three or four stairs when a remark stopped him short.

"Monsieur," said he, "how may come, it is not you who me a lesson in good manners you. Ah, if I were not in such a hurry and if I were not running alone!" said D'Artagnan.

"Mister gentleman in a hurry can find me without running at me! Do you understand me?"

"And where, I pray you?" "Near the Carmes Deschaux noon."

"I will be there." "Endeavor not to make me at a quarter past 12 I will cut ears as you run."

"Good!" cried D'Artagnan. He there ten minutes before 12. At the street gate Porthos

ing with the soldier on guard between the two talkers there room for a man to pass. D'Artagnan thought it would suffice for he sprang forward like a dart. But D'Artagnan had without the wind. As he was to pass the wind blew out long cloak, and D'Artagnan straight into the middle of the crowd. Out doubt Porthos had reason abandoning this part of his venture, instead of quitting his flap in his hand, he pulled it him, so that D'Artagnan rolled up in the velvet. Timidly opening his eyes he found himself with fixed between the two soldiers. Porthos—that is to say, exact the baldrick.

Alas, how most of the thin world have nothing in their appearances! The baldrick, tending with gold in the front nothing but simple buff behind.

"Whew!" cried Porthos, strong efforts to get rid of D'Artagnan who was wriggling about.

"The fellow must be mad against people in this manner."

"Excuse me," said D'Artagnan, peering under the shoulder of the giant, "but I am in such haste running after some one and—"

"And do you always forget when you happen to be in such a hurry?" asked Porthos.

"No," replied D'Artagnan, "no, and, thanks to my eyes, what other people cannot see."

Whether Porthos understood did not understand him, giving him anger.

"Monsieur," said he, "you chance of getting chastised for against musketeers in this fashion."

"Chastised, monsieur!" said D'Artagnan. "The expression is stupid."

"It is one that becomes a man to look his enemies in the face."

"Ah, I know full well that turn your back to yours!" Porthos foamed with rage at a movement to rush after D'Artagnan. "Presently, presently," cried Athos to M. de Treville in a feeble yet perfectly calm voice. "What do you want with me?"

And at these words the musketeer, in irreproachable costume, belted, as usual, with a tolerably firm step, entered the cabinet. M. de Treville, moved to the bottom of his heart by this proof of courage, sprang toward him.

"I was about to say to these gentlemen," added he, "that I forbid my musketeers to expose their lives needlessly, for brave men are very dear to the king, and the king knows that his musketeers are the bravest fellows on earth. Your hand, Athos!"

The door had remained open, so strong was the excitement produced by the arrival of Athos, whose wound, though kept as secret as possible, was known to all. A burst of satisfaction hailed the last words of the captain, and two or three heads, carried away by the enthusiasm of the moment, appeared through the openings of the tapestry. M. de Treville was about to reprehend this infraction of the rules of etiquette when he felt the hand of Athos stiffen within his and upon turning his eyes toward him perceived he was about to faint. At the same instant Athos, who had rallied all his energies to contend against pain, at length overcome by it, fell upon the floor as if he was dead.

"A surgeon!" cried M. de Treville. "Mine! The king's! The best that can be found! A surgeon or my brave Athos will die!"

At the cries of M. de Treville the whole assemblage rushed into the cabinet without his thinking of shutting the door against any one, and all crowded round the wounded man. But all this eager attention might have been useless if the doctor so loudly called for had not chanced to be in the hotel. The surgeon declared that the situation of the musketeer had nothing in it to render his friends uneasy, his weakness having been purely and simply caused by loss of blood.

Then M. de Treville made a sign with his hand, and all retired except D'Artagnan, who did not forget that he had an audience and, with the tenacity of a Gascon, remained in his place.

When all had gone out and the door had closed M. de Treville, on turning round, found himself alone with the young man.

"Pardon me," said he, smiling. "I respected your father very much. What can I do for the son? Tell me quickly: my time is not my own."

"Monsieur," said D'Artagnan, "on quitting Tarbes and coming hither it was my intention to request of you in remembrance of the friendship which you have not forgotten the uniform of a musketeer."

"Well, young man," replied M. de Treville, "I inform you with regret that no one becomes a musketeer without the preliminary ordeal of several campaigns, certain brilliant actions or a service of two years in some regiment of less reputation than ours."

D'Artagnan bowed without replying, feeling his desire to don the musketeer's uniform vastly increased by the difficulties which he learned preceded the attainment of it.

"But," continued M. de Treville, fixing upon his compatriot a look so piercing that it might be said he wished to read the thoughts of his heart—"but on account of my old companion, your purse and would have fought with any one who would have dared to tell me I was not in a condition to purchase the Louvre."

D'Artagnan's carriage became still more imposing. Thanks to the sale of his horse, he commenced his career with 4 crowns more than M. de Treville had possessed at the commencement of his.

"I will write a letter today to the director of the Royal academy, and tomorrow he will admit you without any expense to yourself. Do not refuse this little service. You will be learning riding, swordsmanship in all its branches and dancing; you will make some desirable acquaintances, and from time to time you shall call upon me just to tell me how you are going on and tell me whether I can be of further service to you."

D'Artagnan, stranger as he was to all the manners of a court, could not but perceive a little coldness in this reception.

"Alas, sir," said he, "I cannot but perceive how sadly I miss the letter of introduction which my father gave me to present to you. It was perfidiously stolen from me."

He then related the adventure of Meung, described the well known gentleman with the greatest minuteness and with a warmth and truthfulness that delighted M. de Treville.

"This is all very strange," said M. de Treville, after meditating a minute. "You mentioned my name, then, aloud?"

"Yes, sir, I certainly committed that imprudence, but why should I have done otherwise? A name like yours must be as a buckler to me on my way."

"Tell me," continued M. de Treville, "had not this gentleman a slight scar on his cheek?"

"Yes; such a one as would be made by the grazing of a ball."

"Was he not a fine looking man of lofty stature?"

"Yes."

"Of pale complexion and brown hair?"

"Yes, yes; that is he. How is it, sir, that you are acquainted with this man? If ever I should meet him again, and I will find him, I swear."

"He was waiting for a woman," continued Treville.

"He, at least, departed immediately after having conversed for a minute with the one for whom he appeared to have been looking. He gave her a box; told her that that box contained her instructions and desired her not to open it before she arrived in London."

"Was this woman English?"

"He called her milady."

"It is he! It must be he!" murmured Treville. "I thought he was still at Brussels!"

"Oh, sir, if you know who and what this man is," cried D'Artagnan, "tell me who he is and whence he is! I will relations or even from your instincts, any of these enmities which we see constantly breaking out against the cardinal, bid me adieu and let us separate. I will aid you in many ways, but without attaching you to my person."

Treville said to himself:

"If the cardinal has set this young fox upon me he will certainly not have failed, he who knows how bitterly I execrate him, to tell his spy that the best means of making his court to me is to rail at him."

It, however, proved otherwise. D'Artagnan answered with the greatest simplicity:

"I am come to Paris with exactly such intentions, sir. My father advised me to stoop to nobody but the king, M. the Cardinal, and you, whom he considered the three first personages in France."

D'Artagnan added M. de Treville to the others, as may be perceived, but he thought this adjunction would do no harm.

M. de Treville was surprised to the greatest degree. So much penetration, so much frankness, created admiration, but did not entirely remove his suspicions. Nevertheless he pressed D'Artagnan's hand and said to him:

"You are an honest youth, but at the present moment I can only do for you that which I just now offered. My hotel will be always open to you. Hereafter, being able to ask for me at all hours and consequently to take advantage of all opportunities, you will probably obtain that which you desire. I promised you a letter for the director of the academy. Are you too proud to accept it, young gentleman?"

"No, sir," said D'Artagnan, "and I will answer for it that this one shall not fare like the other."

M. de Treville, leaving his young companion in the embrasure of the window, where they had talked together, seated himself at a table in order to write the promised letter of recommendation. While he was doing this D'Artagnan looked out of the window.

M. de Treville after having written the letter sealed it and, rising, approached the young man in order to give it to him. But at the very moment that D'Artagnan stretched out his hand to receive it M. de Treville was highly astonished to see his protégé make a sudden spring, become crimson with passion and rush from the cabinet, crying, "Ah, he shall not escape me this time!"

"Who? Who?" asked M. de Treville.

"He—my thief!" replied D'Artagnan. "Ah, the traitor!" And he disappeared.

CHAPTER IV.

The Shoulder of Athos, the Baldrick of Porthos and the Handkerchief of Aramis.

D'ARTAGNAN, in a state of fury, crossed the antechamber at three bounds and was darting toward the stairs, which he reckoned upon descending four at a time, when in his heedless course he ran headforemost against Athos, who was coming out of one of M. de Treville's back rooms, and, striking his shoulder violently, made him utter a cry, or, rather, a howl.

"Excuse me," said D'Artagnan, endeavoring to resume his course; "excuse me, but I am in a hurry."

"Ah, I know full well that turn your back to yours!"

Porthos foamed with rage a movement to rush after I

But neither in the street headed through nor in the one eager glance pervaded could any one. However slowly he had walked, he was gone (or perhaps had entered as D'Artagnan inquired of evening with, but nothing, absolutely!

He began to reflect upon that had passed. They were and inauspicious. It was 1 o'clock in the morning, and morning had already brought disgrace with M. de Treville not fail to think the manne D'Artagnan had left him a liar.

Besides this, he had directed himself two good duels with each capable of killing the gans; with two musketeers with two of those beings who seemed so greatly that he perceived in his mind and heart above men. Reflecting on his decision that politeness must course in the future.

D'Artagnan, walking and ing, had arrived within a few of the Hotel d'Arguillon and that hotel perceived Aramis gayly with three gentlemen king's guards. On his part perceived D'Artagnan; but, as forgotten that it was before man that M. de Treville had angry in the morning and the mess of the rebuke the must received was not likely to agreeable, he pretended not.

D'Artagnan was not so duped perceive that he was not was seeking in his mind the least awkward means of repair he remarked that Aramis a handkerchief fall and, by doubt, had placed his foot upon it appeared a favorable opportunity to repair his intrusion. He stepped with the most gracious air resume drew the handkerchief under the foot of the musketeer of the efforts the latter made it and, holding it out to him,

The handkerchief was, in embroidered and had a corner arms at one of its corners blushed excessively and snatched than took the handkerchief D'Artagnan's hand.

FREE ADVICE TO SICK WOMEN

Thousands Have Been Helped
By Common Sense
Suggestions.

Women suffering from any form of female ills are invited to communicate promptly with the woman's private correspondence department of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established a confidential correspondence which has extended over many years and which has never been broken. Never have they published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which they have to draw from, it is more than possible that they possess the very knowledge needed in your case. Nothing is asked in return except your good will, and their advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

Every woman ought to have Lydia E. Pinkham's 80-page Text Book. It is not a book for general distribution, as it is too expensive. It is free and only obtainable by mail. Write for it today.

proof of what I say, here is mine in my pocket."

One of the friends of Aramis was not convinced by his assertion and said with affected seriousness:

"If it were as you pretend it is," said he, "I should be forced, my dear Aramis, to reclaim it myself, for, as you very well know, Bois-Tracy is an intimate friend of mine, and I cannot allow the property of his wife to be sported as a trophy."

"But, my dear intimate friend of Bois-Tracy, I am not less tenderly his friend than you can possibly be, so that decidedly this handkerchief is as likely to have fallen from your pocket as mine," said Aramis.

"No, upon my honor!" cried his majesty's guard.

The young men burst into a loud laugh, and, after having cordially shaken hands, separated.

"Now is my time to make my peace with this gentleman," said D'Artagnan to himself, having stood on one side during the whole of the latter part of the conversation.

"Monsieur," said he, "you will excuse me, I hope."

"By saying so you have lied twice, monsieur."

miraculous balsam for wounds, a balsam given to me by my mother and of which I have made a trial upon myself."

"Well?"

"Well, I am sure that in less than three days this balsam would cure you, and at the end of three days, when you would be cured—well, sir, it would still do me a great honor to be your man."

"Monsieur," said Athos, "that's a proposition that pleases me; not that I accept it, but it savors of the gentleman a league off. I think these fellows will never come."

"If you are in haste, monsieur," said D'Artagnan, "and if it be your will to dispatch me at once, do not inconvenience yourself—I am ready."

"Well, that is again well said," cried

Athos with a gracious nod to D'Artagnan. "That did not come from a man without brains, and certainly not from a man without a heart. Ah, here is one of them, I think!"

In fact, at the end of the Rue Vanguard, the gigantic form of Porthos began to appear.

"What!" cried D'Artagnan, "Is your first second M. Porthos?"

"And here comes the other."

D'Artagnan turned in the direction pointed to by Athos and perceived Aramis.

"What!" cried he in an accent of greater astonishment than before. "Is your second witness M. Aramis?"

"Doubtless he is. Are you not aware that we are never seen one without the others, and that we're called in the musketeers and the guards, at court and in the city. Athos, Porthos and Aramis, or the three inseparables?"

In the meantime Porthos had come up, waved his hand to Athos and then, turning toward D'Artagnan, stood

"Withdraw, young man!" cried Jussac, who, doubtless by his gestures and the expression of his countenance, had guessed D'Artagnan's design. "You may retire. We allow you to do so. Save your skin. Begone quickly."

D'Artagnan did not move. "Come, gentlemen, have you made your minds up?" cried Jussac.

"It is done, gentlemen," said Athos.

"And what do you mean to do?" asked Jussac.

"We are about to have the honor of charging you," replied Aramis, lifting his hat with one hand and drawing his sword with the other.

And the nine combatants rushed upon each other with a fury which, however, did not exclude a certain degree of method.

Athos fixed upon a certain Cabusac, a favorite of the cardinal's; Porthos had Bicarar, and Aramis found himself opposed to two adversaries. As to D'Artagnan, he sprang toward Jussac himself and fought like a furious tiger. Jussac was a fine blade. Nevertheless it required all his skill to defend himself against an adversary who, active and energetic, departed every instant from received rules.

This contest at length exhausted Jussac's patience. Furious at being held in check by him whom he had considered a boy, he became warm and began to commit faults. D'Artagnan, who, though wanting in practice, had a profound theory, redoubled his agility. Jussac, anxious to put an end to this, springing forward, aimed a terrible thrust at his adversary, but the latter parried it, and while Jussac was recovering himself glided like a serpent beneath his blade and passed his sword through his body. Jussac fell like a dead mass.

D'Artagnan then cast an anxious and rapid glance over the field of battle. Aramis had killed one of his adversaries, but the other pressed him warmly. Nevertheless, Aramis was in a good situation and able to defend himself. Bicarar and Porthos had just made counter hits—Porthos had received a thrust through his arm and Bicarar one through his thigh. But neither of the wounds was serious, and they only fought the more earnestly for them.

Athos, wounded again by Cabusac, became evidently paler, but did not give way a foot; he had only changed his swordhand and fought with his left hand.

According to the laws of duelling at that period, D'Artagnan was at liberty

"Not so, if you please, my good friend, not here at least. Do you not perceive that we are opposite the Hotel d'Arguillon, which is full of the cardinal's creatures? I have no objection to killing you, depend upon that,
 but quietly, in a snug remote place,
 where you will not be able to boast of your death to anybody. At 2 o'clock
 I shall have the honor of expecting you at the hotel of M. de Treville.
 There I will point out to you the best place and time." The two young men bowed and separated.

D'Artagnan was acquainted with nobody in Paris. He went, therefore, to his appointment with Athos without a second, determined to be satisfied with those his adversary should choose.

D'Artagnan possessed that invincible stock of resolution which the counsels of his father had implanted in his heart—endure nothing from any one but the king, the cardinal and M. de Treville. He flew, then, rather than walked toward the convent of the Carmes Dechausses, or, rather, Des-chaux, as it was called at that period,
 a sort of building without a window,
 surrounded by barren fields.

Athos, who still suffered grievously from his wound, though it had been dressed by M. de Treville's surgeon at 9, was seated on a post and waiting for his adversary with that placid countenance and that noble air which never forsook him.

"Monsieur," said Athos, "I have engaged two of my friends as seconds,
 but these two friends are not yet come,
 at which I am astonished, as it is not at all their custom to be behind hand."

"I have no seconds on my part, monsieur," said D'Artagnan, "for, having only arrived yesterday in Paris, I as yet know no one but M. de Treville, to whom I was recommended by my father, who has the honor to be in some degree one of his friends."

Athos reflected for an instant.
 "Well, but then," continued he, speaking partly to himself—"well, but then if I kill you I shall have the air of a boy slayer." Then to D'Artagnian: "Ah, how you have hurt me!
 My shoulder quite burns."

"If you would permit me"—said D'Artagnan, with timidity. "I have a

Arms, or the three inseparables?"
 In the meantime Porthos had come up, waved his hand to Athos and then, turning toward D'Artagnan, stood quite astonished.

Permit us to say in passing that he had changed his baldric and was without his cloak.

"Ah, ah!" said he. "What does this mean?"

"This is the gentleman I am going to fight with," said Athos, pointing to D'Artagnan with his hand and saluting him with the same gesture.

"Why, it is with him I am also going to fight," said Porthos.

"But not before 1 o'clock," replied D'Artagnan.

"Well, and I also am going to fight with that gentleman," said Aramis, coming on to the ground as he spoke.

"But not till 2 o'clock," said D'Artagnan, with the same calmness.

"By Jove, this is a clever fellow!"
 murmured Athos.

"And now you are all assembled, gentlemen," said D'Artagnan, "permit me to offer you my excuses."

At this word "excuses" a cloud passed over the brow of Athos, a haughty smile curled the lip of Porthos and a negative sign was the reply of Aramis.

"You do not understand me, gentlemen," said D'Artagnan, throwing up his head, the sharp and bold lines of which were at the moment gilded by a bright sun ray. "I ask to be excused in case I should not be able to discharge my debt to all three, for M.
 Athos has the right to kill me first,
 which must abate your valor in your own estimation. M. Porthos, and render yours almost null, M. Aramis. And now, gentlemen, I repeat, excuse me,
 but on that account only, and—guard!"

At these words, with the most gallant air possible, D'Artagnan drew his sword.

But scarcely had the two rapiers sounded on meeting when a company of the guards of his eminence, commanded by M. de Jussac, turned the angle of the convent.

"Hoi!" cried Jussac, advancing toward them and making a sign to his men to do so likewise. "Hoi, musketeers! Fighting here, then, are you?
 And the edicts—what is become of them?"

"You are very generous, gentlemen of the guards," said Athos, with acrimony, for Jussac was one of the aggressors of the preceding day. "If we were to see you fighting I can assure you that we would make no effort to prevent you."

"Gentlemen," said Jussac, "it is with great regret that I pronounce the thing impossible. Duty before everything.
 Sheathe, then, if you please, and follow us. We will charge upon you if you disobey."

"There are five of them," said Athos half aloud, "and we are but three.
 We shall be beaten again and must die on the spot, for on my part I declare I will never appear before the captain again as a conquered man."

Athos, Porthos and Aramis instantly closed in, and Jussac drew up his soldiers.

This short interval was sufficient to determine D'Artagnan on the part he was to take—between the king and the cardinal. Turning toward Athos and his friends:

"Gentlemen," said he, "allow me to correct your words, if you please. You said you were but three, but it appears to me you are four."

D'Artagnan Passed His Sword Through His Body.

to assist the one he pleased. While he was endeavoring to find out which of his companions stood in greatest need, he caught a glance from Athos.
 This glance was of sublime eloquence.
 With a terrible bound, D'Artagnan sprang to the side of Cahusac, crying:
 "To me, monsieur! Guard or I will slay you!"

Cahusac turned. It was time, for Athos, whose great courage alone supported him, sank upon his knee.

He cried to D'Artagnan: "Do not kill him, young man, I beg of you. I have an old affair to settle with him
 when I am cured and sound again.
 Disarm him only—make sure of his sword. That's it, that's it! Well done!
 Very well done!"

This exclamation was drawn from Athos by seeing the sword of Cahusac fly twenty paces from him. D'Artagnian and Cahusac sprang forward at the same instant, the one to recover, the other to obtain the sword; but D'Artagnan, being the more active, reached it first and placed his foot
 upon it.

Cahusac immediately ran to that one of the guards that Aramis had killed and returned toward D'Artagnan, but on his way he met Athos, who, during this relief which D'Artagnan had procured him, had recovered his breath.
 D'Artagnan perceived that it would be disobliging Athos not to leave him alone, and in a few minutes Cahusac fell, with a sword thrust through his throat.

At the same instant Aramis placed his sword point on the breast of his fallen enemy and compelled him to ask for mercy.

There only then remained Porthos and Bicarot. It was necessary to put an end to the affairs. The watch might come up and take all the combatants, wounded or not, royalists or cardinal-ists. Athos, Aramis and D'Artagnan surrounded Bicarot and required him to surrender.

Two Lutherans take the books continuously, three Adventists and twelve Friends. Books on social questions are said to be by far the most in demand among ministers; next come biographies with works on pure theology near the bottom of a fairly long list.

Mrs. Scott Hopkins is the president of the Woman's Kansas Day club through whose leadership a monument to the pioneers of the Santa Fe trail has just been erected at Great Bend, Kan. At their annual meeting in 1904 the members of the Day club decided to acquire Pawnee rock as a site for the proposed monument. One year later they presented the rock, with five acres of land about it and a road leading up to it, to the state. Pawnee rock is flanked by the old Santa Fe trail. It is fifty feet high, and the monument, which is a granite shaft of twenty-eight feet, surmounts the apex, being imbedded in the rock. The Day club was assisted in erecting this monument by the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Woman's Relief corps, the State Federation of Women's Clubs and the Women's Christian Temperance union.

The Extreme Suffragette.

Three Year Old—Mamma, I want some crackers and jam!

Mother—No, dearie; you can't have any more until Mrs. Pankhurst is out of jail.

Grown Son—This motorcoat of mine is a disgrace to the family. Guess I'll go out and look at some English tweeds.

Mother—English tweeds! Horrors, Harold! You wouldn't be so disloyal! There's only nine months to wait.

Grown Daughter—Mother, I saw a duck of a hand bag downtown today—London make. I think I'll buy it tomorrow.

Mother—Oh, my daughter! How can you give in so to your personal vanity while that martyr is suffering?

Father—But, see here, Mrs. Suffragette, I was just dicker for a swell set of dinner dishes for you—best English make. Your birthday comes next week.

Mother (wildly)—Give it to me for Christmas! I can't take it now. Maybe she'll be out of jail by then for good behavior.

Smoky London.

London suffers an average loss of 38 per cent of bright sunshine through the presence of smoke.

A Little Rhino.

A baby newly arrived in England from India is priced at $5,000. He is an infant rhinoceros.

The Sense of Smell is Very Important to These Insects.

In their antennae, or feelers, ants have five noses, each of which has its own duties to perform.

One nose tells the ant whether it is in its own nest or that of an enemy; another nose discriminates between odors of ants of the same species, but of different colonies; a third nasal organ serves the purpose of discerning the scent laid down by the ant's own feet, so that it may be able to retrace the way quite easily; a fourth nose smells the larvae and pupae, and the fifth nose detects the presence of an enemy.

If an ant be deprived of a certain nose, it will live peaceably with enemies, but if it retains its fifth nose it will fight the alien to the death. There is a difference in the functions of nose one and nose five, although they appear to be somewhat alike.

This sense of smell does not come till the ants are three days old. If, therefore, ants only twelve hours old are placed among others belonging to different colonies, they will grow up quite amicably and not understand that they are a mixed lot, because they will have grown up with ideas of scent in accordance with their surroundings. The sense of smell to them is as important as the sense of sight to human beings.

Placid Hindu Servants.

Hindoo servants are the most imperturbable people in the world. You may throw one downstairs or pat him on the back. He accepts both with exactly the same expression of countenance. The Indian's religion is at the bottom of all his acts, all his feelings. He eats, sleeps, moves and has his being according to religious formula, and his doctrine of reincarnation forms his whole philosophy of life. The fact that you are the master now is due to the fact that you have been the servant in some previous reincarnation. He is the servant now, and the only chance for him to be reborn in the master's position is to learn all the lessons of his present incarnation. He takes everything philosophically. It is all a part of the day's work.

Kept a Watch on His Men.

Sir Edward Harland was the founder of the great Belfast firm of shipbuilders. His lynx eyed vigilance was a legend at the works. It was said that he used to survey the workmen through a telescope from the windows of his residence, Ormiston. All the men felt that his eye was on them. A riveter who has a spite against a fellow worker on a ship can let a riveting hammer fall, apparently by accident, upon his victim. It was gravely alleged that Harland once by his telescope caught a riveter in this act and, as soon as he arrived at the works, walked up to the man and sacked him.

MILLINERY MATTERS.

The Shepherdess Hat In Style Again.

LEGHORN HAT FACED WITH BLUE.

The hat bent down at the front and back and flaring at the sides is an old favorite revived this summer. This shepherdess hat is of leghorn faced with nattier blue and has a trimming of white and blue hyacinths.

Smartness of White.

The woman of limited income should not be tempted by colored linen frocks. They are not a wise investment when gowns must necessarily be few in number. They are almost sure to fade, and even while they possess all their original glory they cannot be touched up and varied by colored cravat and belt as the white outfit can. Such is the imperishable beauty of white that even the inexpensive material known as sailcloth, which can be bought for about 30 cents a yard, can be made to look smarter than the average colored linen. Those venturing upon costumes of sailcloth should, however, to make assurance doubly sure, see that the material has been well shrunk before it is made up.

Hoarding "Trash."

"Most women dread housecleaning, and it is little wonder if one could see into their attics and closets," says the Woman's Home Companion. "They have the 'saving mania' and have indulged it all their lives, and many a one, especially she who has stayed in the old home, has not only her own, but the accumulations of generations of women before her.

"How can any sensible woman be so selfish and so self abusive at the same time as to keep what benefits her in no possible way and yet makes her so much extra work every year? Why not dispose of things to the best possible advantage as they become useless and save half the work of the spring overhauling as well as do a great deal of good?"

For the Matron.

There is little distinction between the gowns of young girls and the matron's frock this season. Still, there are small differences that to the in-

TIPPING IS ANCIENT.

In Shakespeare's Time It Used to Be Called Vailgiving.

The word tip is of comparatively modern origin, as it used to be vails, a shortened form of avails or profits. We speak now of the avails of an estate or of a business transaction. A hundred years ago they called gratuities to servants or waiters vails. Dr. Johnson's dictionary, published in 1755, defines vails as "money given to servants as a perquisite or present rather than in the way of wages." Dean Swift mentions a person "whose revenues, besides vails, amounted to £13." Shakespeare uses the word in the same sense where he makes one of the fishermen in "Pericles" say, "But hark you, my friend, 'twas we that made up this garment and there are certain condolences, certain vails." He wanted to be condoled with a tip.

The practice probably continued to grow after Shakespeare's time, for late in the eighteenth century a philanthropist and reformer of the period published a tract against indiscriminate almsgiving, and denouncing the vails practice as demoralizing both to those who gave and to those who accepted the gratuities. This early reformer was Jonas Hanway (1712-1789), who, after writing a book of eastern travel, undertook to reform some of the social vices of his day. He denounced vailgiving and practiced what he preached by refusing to pay more than the stipulated price for refreshments or for any kind of service or to give gratuities to servants who received wages. But his crusade died with him, and vails still survive under the odious name of tips.—Indianapolis News.

Old Parr's Possible Age.

One of the last services Dean Stanley did for Westminster abbey was to cause the almost effaced inscription over the celebrated old Parr's grave to be recut. It is as follows: "Tho: Parr of ye County of Salop. Borne in AD 1453. He lived in ye reigns of Ten Princes viz, K. Edw. 4, K. Edw. 5, K. Rich. 8, K. Hen. 7, K. Hen. 8, K. Edw. 6, Q. Ma., Q. Eliz., Ka. Ja. & K. Charles. Aged 152 years, and was Buried Here Novemb. 15, 1635."

The "old Countess of Desmond," who is said to have died at the age of 140, is mentioned by Lord Bacon, Archbishop Usher and Sir William Temple. The first assures us that "she did dentige (renew her teeth) twice or thrice, casting her old teeth, and others coming in their place."—London Graphic.

SHE FAINTED WITH THE AGONY

"Fruit-a-lives" Cured Her Kidneys

Miss MAGGIE JANNACK

MOUNTAIN, ONT., DEC. 14th. 1910

"I desire to let the world know the great debt I owe 'Fruit-a-lives' which saved my life when I had given up hope of ever being well again.

For six years, I suffered from dreadful Kidney Disease. My legs and lower part of my body were fearfully swollen. The pain in my side and legs would be so bad that I would faint with the agony.

Five different doctors attended me and all said it was Kidney Disease and gave me no hope of getting well.

A kind neighbor visited me and mentioned the case of Mrs. Fenwick who had been cured of a sickness like mine. I took "Fruit-a-lives" and in a short time, I began to feel better—the swelling went down—the pains were easier—and soon I was well.

I have gained over 30 pounds since taking "Fruit-a-lives"—and my friends look upon my recovery as a miracle."

(Miss) MAGGIE JANNACK.

"Fruit-a-lives" are sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c.—or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-lives Limited, Ottawa.

Beginning of the Trouble.

"Yes," said Breezem, who happened to be in a reminiscent mood, "during my younger days I sowed the wind, but later"—

"Well, what happened later?" questioned Mrs. Breezem.

"I married you," continued the alleged head of the matrimonial combine.

Sure Way to Get a Job.

One of the Unemployed—I wish I had money enough so I shouldn't have to work for a living.

Another of Them—So do I. In that case, you know, it would be so easy to get a job.

STRIPED COSTUME OF BLACK AND WHITE SILK.

gown of black and white silk seen in the illustration is an ideal one for the matrou who is inclined to be a trifle stout. Bands of plain black silk give long lines, and the basque effect in the back is particularly good.

Summer Hair Etiquette.

The girl who would have wavy hair finds hot irons the quickest tools at her command. If these are once used they are not so harmful as imagined, but woe betide her hair after a few months of overhot irons!

Safer and more natural is the water wave. This lasts well on some hair, even on straight hair, while with other girls it is not successful. Failure is usually due to oil in the hair.

The hair is wet and brushed back flat to the head. It is then pushed out from the forehead with a comb for about an inch and held in place with small hairpins. This is repeated until the entire face is circled. Then another section of the hair is combed up and again pinned in place, the process being repeated until the entire head is covered with a series of little ridges.

On Saturday of last week citizens of Napanee were shocked and grieved to hear of the very sudden death of Dr.
G. C. T. Ward. The doctor had been unwell but a few days but not serious-

Dr. Ward was born at Cataragui, Ont., in 1856. He lived for a few years on a farm at Sandy Creek, N. Y., and afterwards attended Grammar School at Kingston and Bath. In the year 1879 he graduated from Queen's University Kingston, and commenced the practice of his profession in Napanee the same year. During his long residence in Napanee—some thirty-three years—the doctor gave much of his time and ability for the welfare of the town. He has represented East Ward for many years in the Town Council and in 1897 was elected Mayor. He also gave valuable services on the Board of Electric Light Commissioners when the town had a municipal plant. Besides his sorrowing wife he leaves five children,
